Everyone has an opinion on how they would like change their community in a positive way. Everyone has a right to express that opinion. Yet not everyone has the authority. If I had the authority I would not only clean up the parks, but fix them up to where they not only nice but more exciting to go to. After the following I will go to every school in the community to do kind of like a clean house on the teachers. Last but not least there would create more ways for people to get involved like community service opportunities.

Fixing up parks and clean them up on the way is a start to cleaning up the community. It will help the community by not only making it look better, but getting people to get out on their free time with their family and friends. Fixing up the park especially the fields and play ground will lead to less injuries since there will be less pot holes. While making it safer you could add more things to do at the park than just being in the playground. For example you could add a skateboarding park nearby so that teens could hang and ride around there rather than being out in the streets most of the time.

Now, let's look at the schools. Every school has those few teachers that don't teach their students a thing. So I would have specialized people to interview not only the teachers and the students to see what they do around the classroom. Also check their records on failing students to see if the students didn't try at all or it was on the teacher's side. This will help the students a lot so when they go into higher classes especially AP ones or even college they aren't sitting there confused and dropping out. The more students are learning the smarter our community will be.

Creating more community service opportunities will not only that it can help high school students applications for college but help the community in a big way. Some help clean streets, empty lots, natural parks, and PCTs, while others help in the old folks homes, at marathons, and hospitals. Creating all these opportunities can help the community in many ways. It helps in many different ways by reducing the risk of depression, keeping people healthier, and increases people's self-esteem. Also people can learn techniques that they may use in other for future jobs, careers, and even things at home. Although it helps the individual who is volunteering it helps the community on the other hand. For example the cause could be for having a greener community and the people volunteering for this community service that someone has set up are cleaning around neighborhoods, empty lots, businesses etc.

If I had the authority to change the community in a positive way I would not only fix up the parks, but even add a few things to the park. Then I would go over to the schools in the community and inspect all of the teachers to see if they are the best teachers they have and or can get. Last, but not least create more community service opportunities. In putting forth these ideas, I believe they will help the community in their own way. I hope that maybe one day they could be used and or referenced from in future years.
